Minister said that Islamic world had given up on their fundamental heritage which was observation, inquiry, reflection and critical thinking. "This lies at the root of underdevelopment in the Islamic world", he said.

The Minister outlined a seven-point reform, audit and performance plan that universities in Pakistan would have to follow in future. This includes academic excellence in imparting knowledge, research and innovation, strong academia industry linkages, community service and contribution to society, technology enablement, corporate governance, and above all impact of graduates in society. He also said that this framework will result in formation of a premiere league of universities which will prepare them to advance into top 100 universities of the world.
